HISTORY OF EDGEFIELD.

A Review of the Book by Prof. R. Means Davis as Published in the Baltimore American.

History of Edgefield County—By John A. Chapman. (9x5 1/2, pp. 521. Maps.) Elbert H. Aull, Newberry, S. C.

Edgefield County, South Carolina, lies on the Savannah river, and before its proportions were curtailed, bordered on that part of Georgia embracing the city of Augusta. Its history forms a large part of the history of the State. Since the first settlement its people have been noted for their independence and fearlessness, sometimes degenerating into recklessness. Edgefield was long considered the Galway of South Carolina, but is now one of the most peaceful sections of the State. Being on the border land between the low and the up country, this region was until 1758 a portion of the hunting ground of the powerful Cherokees, although in 1730 Fort Moore, on the Savannah, was erected as a trading post and a frontier defense of civilization. During the Revolution this territory was the scene of fierce conflict between Whig and Tory. It formed a part of the old Ninety-Sixth district, in which after peace was restored were found 1,400 widows and orphans, living protests against fratricide strife. Edgefield has been the birthplace or home of many men distinguished in State and national history. William Butler, a noted Whig partisan, defeated Robert Goodloe Harper for Congress in 1800, and served several terms, voluntarily retiring in favor of the rising statesman John C. Calhoun, to whom he said: "You can debate with John Randolph; I cannot." He was the progenitor of Gov. Pierce M. Butler, who fell at the head of the Palmetto Regiment in Mexico; of Judge and Senator A. P. Butler, the attack on whom in his absence by Charles Sumner led to the assault on the latter by Preston S. Brooks, a relative, who also came from Edgefield. Former Senator M. C. Butler is from the same family. Among other citizens of Edgefield were George McDuffie, the fiery free trade leader of nullification; F. W. Pickens and M. L. Bonham. Congressmen and war generals; Chancellor Wardlaw, author of the ordinance of secession; James H. Hammond, Louis T. Wigfall, of Texas; Travis and Bonham, heroes of the Alamo; Gen. James Longstreet and Senator Benjamin R. Tillman. Many others were prominent in many walks in life.

Mr. Chapman, the author, is a native of Edgefield. Born in 1817, his personal reminiscences cover a period of fourscore years, and he has diligently collated all published history and much valuable tradition relating to the county. His volume of more than 500 pages abounds in local incident and anecdote, interspersed plentifully with biographies written in a pleasant style. The work is somewhat loosely put together and lacks an index. It is, therefore, faulty as a book of reference, but is a pleasant companion for one who wishes to while away a leisure hour. Its value consists in the original material, which is now for the first time preserved for the future. There are many general histories, but the life and genius of the people are to be found only in local annals portraying their homely ways and thoughts. While intended for local demand, this work will be of value to the general reader who wishes to obtain a closer insight into a people that has played a prominent part in making the peculiar history of South Carolina. The volume is well printed on good paper and is attractively and strongly bound.

AFTER WATER POWERS.

A Chicago Engineer Now in the South Looking This Way.

The secretary of state has received a letter from Charles H. Howe, consulting and mining engineer of W. 95th Place, Chicago, who is now in Gainesville, Ga., asking for full information about South Carolina's available water powers particularly these "of the first magnitude." He says: "It may be of future interest and the means of bringing capital to your parts."

The secretary of state has no printed matter available to send to such inquirers, and he suggests that those in touch with the important undeveloped powers write to Mr. Howe at Gainesville, Ga.

MARRYING ON $6 A WEEK.

Opinions of Various Clergymen on the Subject—How Much Should a Man Earn Before He Can Marry?

(From the Boston Post.)

The New York clergyman who advised one of his parishioners not to marry on $6 a week has aroused a storm of criticism as well as raising again the question as to how much a man should earn before he can marry.

Father McCarren, rector of the Church of Our Lady of Lourdes, Brooklyn, does not believe that a young man who makes only $6 a week should get married, and as a result of the advice that he gave her on the subject Miss Louise Sweet, one of his parishioners, broke her engagement.

Miss Sweet was engaged to a stylish young man, who told her he was from Boston. He said his family was wealthy, although he admitted that his own income was only $6 a week. Miss Sweet went to her pastor for advice and he did not think it advisable to perform the ceremony. Acting upon his advice she broke her engagement.

In speaking of the case the priest said: "Six dollars a week is entirely insufficient to support a wife. Many a young woman is deceived in that way. Miss Sweet would have regretted taking the step for all the days of her life, but too late to remedy it."

The position of the New York priest has aroused considerable comment among Boston clergymen and several of them gave their views on the subject to a Post reporter.

Mrs. O'Callaghan, of St. Augustine's Church, South Boston, says that it all depends on the woman whether or not a man should marry on $6 a week.

"A saving wife, you know, can make one dollar go farther than some women make three," he said.

The Rev. William Brownig, pastor of the Church of the Immaculate Conception, when asked if he thought it practicable for a man to wed on such a small salary, said:

"No, of course not. It might in some cases be justified, but very seldom. Still, it would depend entirely on the parties concerned."

Dr. George L. Perin, of the Every Day Church, said he knew a great many married couples who lived on less than $10 a week and were very happy.

"Why," he said, "poor people want to marry the same as rich people, and besides there might be a thousand things to depend on besides the actual salary. Perhaps a couple might live in the country; if so, $6 goes a long way; or perhaps if he lives in the city his wife may be earning, too. Oh, yes, I think a great many people are happily married on $6 a week."

The Rev. W. H. Fitzpatrick, of St. Gregory's Church, said: "Do I think a man ought to marry on less than $10 a week? Well, that all depends on circumstances and very much on the woman. If she is a good manager she can make the $6 look like double that amount." "But," added the clergyman, "I don't know many people who live on that amount, and I think it would be a very poor sort of a man who would ask a girl to marry him on that salary."

Pr. ss Notice for September Designer.

The advance styles for autumn are presented most attractively in The Designer for September. Of great practical value is an article on "School Array" for the boys and girls, and in the millinery pages are given full directions for making a stylish toque suitable for the season. Especially interesting among the literary features is the initial appearance of "What Women are Doing," under the editorship of the feminine readers of The Designer. "Indian Lace Work," by Jane W. Guthrie, "Simple Treatment of Mantels," by Mary Kilsyth, and "The Little Lady's Toilet," by Dr. Sarah A. Frenchbelle, are contributions of great merit, all handsomely illustrated.

The fiction of this number consists of "The Effacement of Susan Ross," by Celia E. Shute; "The Little Dark Room," by Harriet Caryl Cox, and the continuation of "The Apology of Ayliffe," by Ellen Olney Kirk. "Crocheted Table Mats," by Kate P. Daniel, furnishes suggestions for the employment of idle hours. The regular department of "Notes of New Books," "Selections for the Recitationist," "Toilet Table Chat," "Etiquette Hints," points on Dressmaking, "In Motherland," and "The Kitchen Kingdom" are practical, valuable and timely.

A PROFESSIONAL NUPTIALIST.

York County Magistrate Who Seems to Have Wheels in His Head.

The following is from the Columbia correspondence of the News and Courier:

Squire Bailes, who lives on the border line between the two Carolinas, advertises himself as a "professional nuptialist," whatever that may be, and now he wants to be a magistrate over on the South Carolina side. He gets out unique advertising matter, and here is one of his business cards sent Gov. McSweeney:

Go to

SQUIRE BAILES

To Get Married.

The Greatest of all Ambitious Philanthropist and Professional Nuptialist.

MARRIAGE FEES.

To those who can't pay more. $1.00 Common Fee. . . . . 2.00 Secret Service. . . . . 5.00 Advertising Price. . . . . 3.00 Rich Man's Price. . . . . 10.00 Printed Marriage Certificates in different styles and sizes free. Have nobody but Squire Bailes.

It is more popular to be married by him nowadays than all the licenses you can get. Don't be married at home, it is no enjoyment. More people get married in South Carolina to its population than any other state in the Union.

It is nothing unusual to see half a dozen couples get married here any Sunday. Sunday is his biggest day and he is therefore at home. He marries nearly 200 couples every year.

He is situated most conveniently, just across the State line, Eleven miles south of Charlotte, and one west of the Ville of Pine.

Call and see me, I am not hard to find, My ceremony is easy, but binding, and treatment kind.

'Phone, hotel and livery accommodations.

It is perhaps the most original advertising scheme that has ever been gotten out. The squire certainly seems to be a record breaker. But the chief point is that the people in the Pineville section want a magistrate and want Gov. McSweeney to appoint Bailes. There is no law for it.

The letter from the "professional nuptialist" reads as follows:

Pineville, N. C., Aug. 4, 1902.

To the Governor of South Carolina—Greeting: Whereas we have a new election precinct in this upper corner of Fort Mill township, for the convenience of everybody, being six and one half miles from Fort Mills and out of the way. We want to know if we are not entitled to a magistrate or justice of the peace at this new precinct. If we want it and need it as badly as we do. We have already last year petitioned the legislature, and right here let me ask, is that the right and proper thing to do? Can't you appoint a man recommended for the office or allow us to run such a man at our box or boxes at this term of election? He, I know, would put up with a small salary. My name was given more than once and I know I would. The farmers are the mudsills of the whole construction and I think they deserve more convenience, credit and legislation.

Please let me hear from your honor without delay and oblige.

Very respectfully,

W. O. Bailes.

DISPENSARY IN GEORGIA.

It is a Question That Will Be the Big Issue In That State.

It would be an interesting situation if Georgia would adopt the much discussed and frequently criticised dispensary system which has for so long been an issue in South Carolina politics. There is, however, a possibility that this will happen, says the Washington Post.

When Governor Candler vetoed the bill proposing for Georgia a state dispensary patterned after the Tillman plan in South Carolina, a law was passed providing for a dispensary in Floyd County, and it was adopted, after a hot fight. The operations of the dispensary have been closely observed by the advocates and opponents of the system, and the former claim the showing will lead to the adoption of a state dispensary. The net profits of the dispensary at Rome, Ga., the principal city of Floyd County, during the month of June, were $3,200, and as the profits have constantly increased since it was started three months ago, it is estimated that the county treasury will be enriched some $50,000 by the end of the year. The taxpayers are very glad to be relieved of the imposition of direct taxes to this amount.

The operation of the dispensary plan will be still further observed in order to test whether it increases or diminishes the sale and use of intoxicants, the frequency of crime, etc. If from a moral standpoint it shows to be as good advantage as from an economic point of view, an earnest campaign will be made for its general adoption.

SCHOOL HOUSE WRECKED.

The Winds Blew It Down With Fatal Results.

Union, August 6.—The new two-story school building in the Monarch Mills community, just beyond the corporate limits of the town was blown down by the strong wind of a few minutes duration here this afternoon. The building was a wooden structure and was nearly completed.

One workman was killed and two or three injured, one being very seriously hurt. Mack Coln, white, was caught under the falling structure, and his head was mashed, death immediately resulting. Tom Long, white, had his back broken and his hip badly dislocated. Clarence Vaughan, also white, was painfully injured about the shoulder. A negro was also hurt, but not seriously. There were several narrow escapes.

There's nothing sweeter in a world of joys than the first weeping of a new born babe.

Seven Stages of Women

CHARACTER AND QUALITY.

The first seven years are infancy; the second, childhood; the third, girlhood; the fourth, fully developed womanhood; the fifth, infancy of age; the sixth, old age; the seventh, the lessons go on, and character is being matured and fixed.

After that few changes occur in the real person, yet a cessation of a habit established in girlhood causes a disturbance of the system that takes the strongest constitution. Immediate change of life, in a healthy woman when passed, seems to endow her with a new lease of life, but in others, where the seeds of disease have been sown, the change gives them increased activity, and they appear in more aggravated form.
